AN APPRECIATION OF MR. LUMBY

Mr. Lumby is dead. These were the thrilling words that shocked Stivers High School and the community in general on Tuesday afternoon, April 16.

While his health had not been good for several years, and his physical powers were gradually giving way, yet we little expected the sudden and almost dramatic ending. Through will power and sheer determination he remained at his post of duty until the day before the final summons.

Several traits of character stand out prominently in the life of Mr. Lumby. His fidelity to duty was ever manifest. Even though suffering almost constantly from physical pain during the past year, he never requested that his work be lessened or that he be permitted to absent himself even temporarily. He took an unusual pride in his work. No one could take better care of his own private property than he did of that which belongs to the public. He was pleased to place on exhibition the different tools made by his department, and was always deeply appreciative of the kindly expressions by those who were privileged to inspect them.

Loyalty was another of his chief characteristics. No one could possibly be more devoted to Stivers and her every interest than was Mr. Lumby. He believed in Stivers. He worked for Stivers. He loved Stivers, and was happy at Stivers. Only two weeks before his death he told me of his plans for the summer vacation; how he hoped to regain his health and strength by going to northern Michigan, and how he expected to return and render many more years of service in his chosen field. He was loyal to his school, to his friends and to his country.

I never knew any one who stood the "acid test" of friendship better than he. He never wavered in his friendship. His memory will always be dear to us.

"They never quite leave us, our friends who have passed Through the shadow of death to the sunlight above,
A thousand bright memories are holding them fast
To the places they blest with their presence and love." W. H. M.

Bear witness, Earth, we have made our choice For freedom's brotherhood.

-Kipling.

Your Hearts and Ours Are Sealed

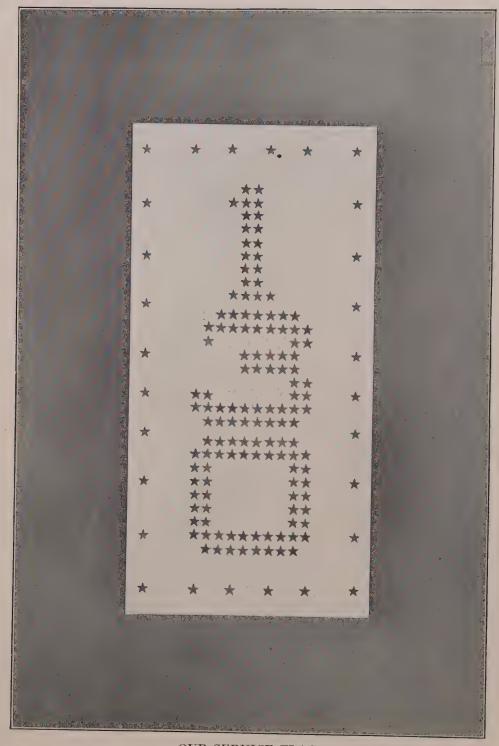

True sons of Stivers' teaching
In camp—on battle field
By memories' thousand, thousand links
Your hearts and ours are sealed.

Brave hearts, we're sending with you An army, hundreds strong Of loving thoughts and tender prayers And boyish jest and song.

We have no time for sorrow, For pain or shallow tears; We'll hold that line—hit ,em hard High hearts—no room for fears.

High hearts—ah well, in quiet wood
With jest and shouting done—
Our prayer—God grant us peace—
The lasting peace that crowns the good fight won.

THOS. W. HAWTHORN 1899-1918

Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori.

Tom Hawthorn, a Stivers graduate of the class of 1917, was one of the first Dayton boys to answer the call of his country, having enlisted in the field artillery in May, 1917. After several weeks' training at Triangle Park, he left Dayton with his comrades of Battery D for Camp Sheridan, Alabama, where he remained until the time of his death, February 14, 1918.

While his loss is keenly felt, yet he will ever live in the memory of his friends as a good comrade and as a brave soldier who has been faithful to his trust.

"He will not come to us! Afar, heart high
He fared to find fulfillment of his dreams.
Athirst for romance, beaconing destiny,
He sought what to fair youth the fairest seems.
Singing he went—song ever on his lips—
Bright Phosphor of clear poesy, whose beams
Still shine on us even in his star's eclipse."

BERNARD FREEMAN
1899-1918

Yes he was brave, most brave, with laughter on his lips.

To Bernard Freeman, a member of the class of '19, Stivers has dedicated the second gold star on its service flag. Bernard enlisted in the United States Aero Service as an apprentice draftsman in January, 1918. He was stationed at Fort Thomas, Kentucky for several weeks and later was transferred to Camp McArthur, Texas. While here he contracted pneumonia, against which he battled for several weeks. It was not his part to accompany his comrades across the sea, but to make the supreme sacrifice in his own land, March 17, 1918.

The name of this soldier lad will ever suggest the cherished thought that America stands for liberty and justice, and that her sons are in deed and word true to the red, the white and the blue.

"He was not mine to give, he gave Himself that he might save
All that a Christian should revere
All that enlightened men hold dear,
What if he should not come back?
You say,
Ah! well! my sky would be more gray
But thru the clouds the sun will shine
And vital memories be mine,
God's test of manhood is I know,
Not, 'Will he come?' But, 'Did he go?'"

A Thoughtful Stivers

"Ay, war, they say, is hell; it's heaven, too. It lets a man discover what he's worth."

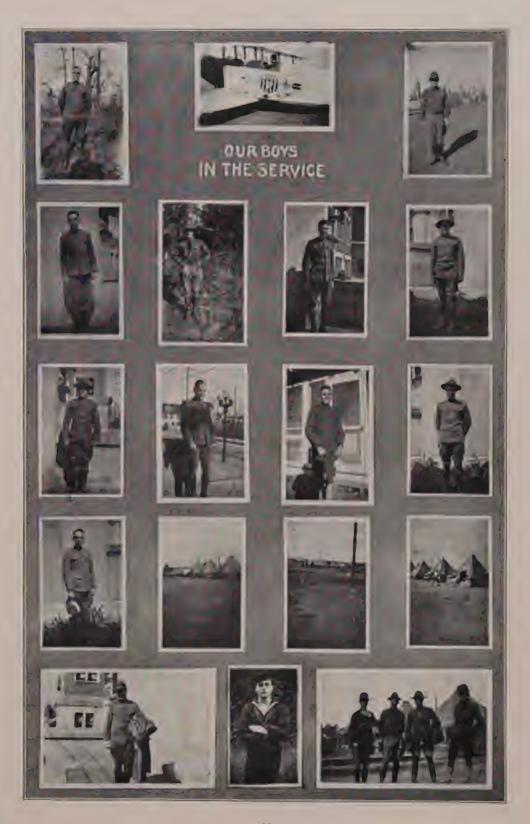

Stivers is more complete and beautiful this year than ever before, for to the wholesome work and carefree play of other years is added a still nobler element. This is the high spirit of patriotic service, which through the days and weeks of the year has gradually grown to be the moving principle of our school life. The pleasures and common activities of former times seem mere self-indulgence now and fail to arouse in us the enthusiasm which comes spontaneously when we are doing our real work of helping to bring back peace to the world. This is indeed our real work and we cannot judge otherwise when we contemplate our beautiful service flag, which represents the best offering Stivers is making to help free the world from the mad tyranny of the oppressor. One hundred and sixty-five of our boys are waiting with unblemished fidelity and brayery in camp and on battlefield, willing to die that we may have the glory and gladness of life. They are surrendering all. Are we even yet with equal faith and courage ready to do the task which lies at our feet? When our hearts go across the sea to the "dear ground glorified with grief and tears" we long for more purposeful action. When our imagination pictures to us the awful realities so bravely faced by the boys over there, we become overwhelmed with a desire to help with all our heart and soul, and account the giving of our time and money and strength as no sacrifice.

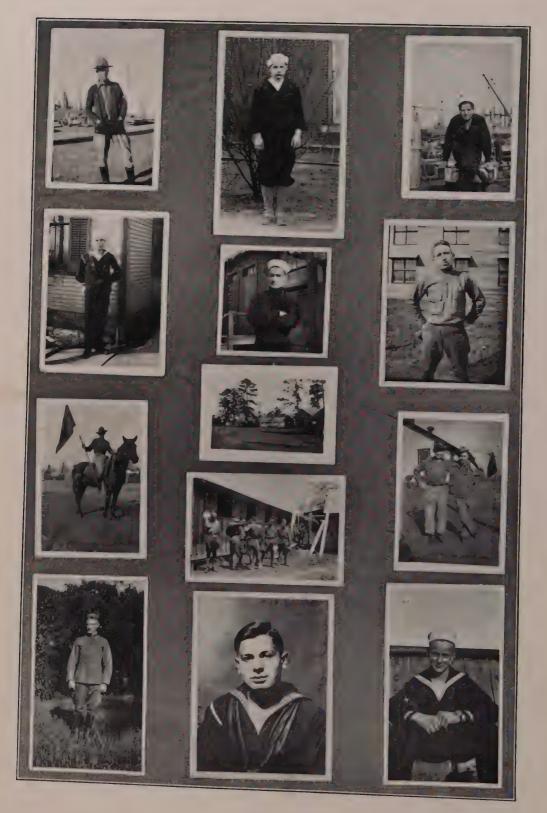

Let us then be more and more ready and eager to pour out our whole spirit and all our resources that

> "Life may be indeed Life, not permitted breath."

Our war cry is a cry of devotion to peace. Our beloved country has embraced war, not for its pomp and circumstance, but as an honorable, though bitter, means of gaining a more abundant peace.

The Ghost of School Days Past

When Bob awoke it was so dark that he could scarcely distinguish the objects about the room.

To his great astonishment the clock went on from six to seven and from seven to eight, and on up to twelve, then stopped. Twelve! It was past two when he went to bed. The clock was wrong. Twelve!

"Why, it isn't possible," said Bob, "that I can have slept a whole day and far into another night." He lay in this state of uneasiness for another hour, when as the clock struck one, lights flashed up in the room and someone stood by the bedside.

"Are you a Spirit, sir?" said Bob.

"I am!"

"Who and what are you?" Bob continued.

"I am the Ghost of School Days Past."

"Long Past?" inquired Bob.

"No. Your past.'

Bob then made inquiry as to the nature of the business that had brought him there.

"Your welfare!" said the Ghost.

Bob expressed himself much obliged, but could not help thinking that a night of unbroken rest would have been more conducive to that end. The Spirit must have heard him thinking, for it said, "Take heed! Rise and walk with me!"

It would have been in vain for Bob to plead that the weather and the hour were not favorable, for the Spirit was already at the window.

They passed through the wall, out into the streets of the city. "Good Heaven!" said Bob, as he looked around him. "There is Parker High School. I was just a boy when I went there."

The Spirit gazed upon him mildly. Bob was conscious of a thousand odors, each one connected with a thousand thoughts and hopes and joys long

"Your lip is trembling," said the Ghost. "And what is that upon your cheek?" Bob muttered that it was a pimple, and begged to be led on.

They walked on and on and finally they met groups of boys and girls, carrying books. Bob recognized many of them and also named some of the books they carried.

Soon they came to a large and stately building.

"Stivers has not changed much," said the Ghost. "Some still fail although it is a place for study." Bob said he knew it.

They went in, the Ghost and Bob, and up the stairs. Before them were the long corridors and large recitation rooms.

In one of the rooms were a number of boys, talking and laughing; their books lay on the desks-forgotten. Bob sat down in a seat and wept to see the idle boy he had been.

"I wish," Bob muttered, looking about him after drying his eyes with his cuff, "but it's too late now."

"What is the matter?" asked the Spirit.

"Nothing," said Bob, "nothing. There were some of the boys who would have studied. I wish I had let them, that's all." The Ghost smiled, "Let us see a different picture."

The room grew larger and larger until Bob found it looked very much like the Auditorium. As he looked Coach Marquardt walked across the platform, and following him the basketball team, that had just returned, Champions of Ohio.

Bob turned to the Spirit and said, "Just think, some of those boys helped defeat Steele in football that year too. The score I think was 44 to 0. If I had only been as great as they were!"

The room grew smaller again, and instead of just seats, there were desks. There sat Bob, an idle dreamer. Bob looked at the Ghost, and, with a shaking of his head, said: "I was no better in my Junior year."

He turned toward the other side of the room and glanced through an open door. He saw a number of boys diligently at work.

Bob whispered to the Ghost, "Those co-ops had many trials and tribulations to be sure, working in the shop one week and studying at school the next." The Ghost smiled. "Yes, indeed, they were a worthy set."

"Do you remember," said the Spirit, "what that printed sheet hanging on the front wall stands for?"

"Yes," Bob answered, with tears in his eyes. "That is Sitvers' Roll of Honor of '17. It honors seventeen boys who were the first to leave school to serve their country."

Although they had but that moment stood in the Junior room they were now entering the Senior room in the next corridor.

The Ghost stopped before a desk where a boy, with a frown on his face, was scattering a few words over a large sheet of paper. This was Bob's former self, to be sure.

The Ghost smiled and asked Bob if he knew what the boy was writing.

"Know it!" said Bob. "Did I not study hard the night before that Burke test? But it was too late then."

"My time grows short," observed the Ghost. "Quick!"

So again Bob found himself in the Auditorium. It was quiet now. The students were solemn instead of happy as on former occasions. Before him Bob beheld a large red flag with a pure white center, which held one hundred and thirty blue stars.

The Spirit looked down at Bob and said: "For what does it stand?" And Bob, his voice a little shaky, replied, "It stands for 130 courageous young men who gave their all for their country." Then his eyes filled with tears as he added: "I remember it was not long after this dedication that two gold stars found a place in that field of purity, in honor of Stivers' first two soldier dead."

"Yes," said the Ghost," sympathetically. "Spirit!" said Bob, "show me no more." "One scene more," exclaimed the Ghost.

They were in another scene and place; a room—large, and containing a number of long tables and also several sewing machines. Around the tables were groups of girls busily sewing and knitting.

"Were they not noble," said the Spirit, "to give up so much time to the Red Cross work?"

"Yes," returned Bob, "but we boys bought thrift stamps, and I encouraged dad to buy a Liberty Bond." But even as he said this, before him came a picture of himself spending money here and there foolishly.

"Spirit!" said Bob in a broken voice, "remove me from this place."

"Come!" said the Ghost, "the last is pleasant."

They passed into the open air again and through lighted streets until they came to a large building, which Bob recognized as Memorial Hall. As they entered they heard strains of music and saw before them a long procession of young men and women, each one smiling.

"I remember," reflected Bob, "Commencement Day was a happy day, especially for those who led the procession as honor pupils."

Awaking in the middle of a prodigiously tough snore, Bob had no occasion to be told that the clock had just struck eight and that he was due at the office at 8:30. He arose and dressed quickly, but it can not be said that he worked faster than his thoughts.

"Humph!" said he, "it has been five years since I left Stivers."

The Past of the Junior Cadets

ALL to arms! War has been declared by the allied students of Dayton against that horrid monster, Ignorance! It is the duty of each and every patriot of this allied organization to answer the call to his colors. Eight hundred strong responded to the summons one September morning in the year, 1915, boiling over with pep and enthusiasm, all loyal supporters of a righteous cause. These ardent volunteers, although untrained in military tactics, were assigned to that wonderful cantonment, Parker, gathering from all parts and representing all classes, ages and sizes, but having one mark of similiarity, namely.

a zeal to prepare themselves for higher and greater ideals through the medium of knowledge.

For this purpose, they were dispersed into twenty companies, each with an able and tried officer, a graduate of an Officer's Training School, as its captain. At once each private was handed a schedule of his daily routine which he must strictly observe. Many hours each day were given to drilling in order to prepare for higher commissions. The sergeants of the respective companies each met and conferred with the General once a week. The duties assigned to this council consisted in enforcing the laws and sanitary regulations prescribed by the staff and in acting as a court for those who shirked military discipline.

Not all the time was given to study and drilling. Many forms of recreation were enjoyed, for "Sammie must play as well as work." Friday nights were especially enjoyed by these youthful recruits, for contests in athletics and spelling were held between the different companies, assembled in the great community hall. Assemblies were held frequently, in company formation and instructive lectures were given. In the early spring a furlough was given, for a week, to all. After returning to camp, plans were made to celebrate Shakespeare's anniversary, which afforded an outlet for dramatical aspirations.

United with Camp Parker were Camps Stivers and Steele whose members, although more advanced, were allies also in the war against Ignorance. When the training which Camp Parker afforded was completed, furloughs were given in order that preparation might be made to enter into a new camp, either Stivers or Steele, one of which had to be chosen before leaving the old camp.

At the expiration of the furloughs, the recruits reported at their respective camps, early in the fall. Being more interested in Camp Stivers, we shall follow those who entered there through their course of intensive training where many friendships were formed with older members of Camp Stivers. The training here took them deeper into the methods of warfare against Ignorance. During this year the three camps again united to participate in the celebration of Lexington Day. After nine months' training and study, final examination was held to determine who had sufficient knowledge in order to continue the work. Those who passed were advanced to the rank of cadet.

After another brief furlough, the cadets again returned to Camp Stivers. During the year many drives, such as the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. and Thrift Stamps, were conducted for the cause of war, and many loyal cadets subscribed to each. With many wishes for their success, we shall leave them, working hard and steady, industriously striving for a commission which many will attain next year.

L. H., '19.

Here's to Stivers! Hurrah for you! Here's to the Juniors! Soldiers true!

Calls from Belgium came for shoes, And not a Junior could refuse.

Then came the drive for the Red Cross, Many gave a dollar and felt no loss.

Did they buy thrift stamps? Oh my! Yes, They all belong to the B. T. S.

Pay for their bond? You bet they did, They'd do it again should the President bid.

Afghans and bags they sent to our boys, And other things too which add to their joys.

Thus, as Juniors, they've done their part, With willing hands and loyal hearts.

"Lest We Forget"

S Spring approaches, our minds take us to the pleasures of a year ago, hence our life at Parker looms up vividly as we think of the windy walks to and from school, the stroll to Van Cleve Park at the lunch period, the snapshots taken there and the intense dislike to study at such a time.

Do we remember the exciting time at the beginning of the year? How we blundered into the wrong places, and couldn't find the Auditorium or the Lunch Room? We had a lot of fun, wondering where we would land next, meanwhile hanging on to those schedules, our life preservers, like a drowning man to a straw. As Freshies always are wise—ahem—after a week or two we went to class without them. Wasn't that wonderful?

Who of our class can forget the Christmas Party? "stunts" were all good, and our seats on the floor were not so bad as we had expected. Indeed, we looked so comfortable that the Christmas tree fell down to join us.

In April came Lexington Day with its parade. For several days before, almost every room one peeped into, looked as though it might be a part of Old Glory herself, for the floor was strewn with scraps of red, white and blue paper, which later made their appearance in the shape of caps for the girls. The great day arrived and we joined the line in a drizzly rain, which dampened our hair and clothing, if not our spirits. We marched in full glory down Main Street—about eight hundred strong flags flying, caps bobbing, trying our best to do two things at once—keep a straight line, and dodge the puddles.

About this time the Good English League was organized, the representatives being friendly rivals in securing the most members. Those were trying days, lest they themselves make a slip of the tongue, which would be reported. Perchance, some witty Freshman might make a joke of it, and it might appear on a page of the Occasional. By the way, the Parkerites were very proud of the Occasional, because it was one of the few Freshman papers in the state.

But no excitement was greater than that of the moment the firebell rang, to announce the tardy arrival of the circus parades. A few people were so awed at the sight of the elephants that they forgot the way back to Parker. And consequently while the faithful ones pored over lessons, the lucky few sipped pink lemonade and fed peanuts to the elephants.

If Parkerites were unusually juvenile and gay on circus days, they were sedate and dignified when the eighth grades filed through the halls and rooms to see them at work. The very expressions on their faces seemed to say, "Look at us! We go to High School!"

The Parker picnic proved a "picnic," indeed, for it was all fun. Excitement ran high in anticipating the outcome of the ball game between the teachers and the boys.

So with some work, and more fun, we finished our Freshmen year without losing much except some of our "greeners" and a great deal of our chewing gum in Miss Todd's box in the Auditorium.

For a year we had eagerly anticipated our life at Stivers and longed for the time when we were to be members of this great school. When the time did come, it seemed too much like the beginning of our Freshmen year again, for the experiences were new and strange, but it took only the Senior-Sophomore reception to make us feel that we were a vital part of the school.

This year Thanksgiving held more for us than the usual turkey and cranberry sauce, for it was the day of the thrilling football game between Stivers and Steele. We Sophomores were greatly impressed by the spirit and enthusiasm which characterized this contest on the gridiron.

Although to the reader it may seem that we do nothing but play, yet we are doing our full share in academic activities, as was evident when we numbered twenty-two honor pupils. As Sophomores we are striving to do our utmost for the Red Cross and Liberty Loan Campaign, as well as for all patriotic causes. When a boy sees a girl knitting so busily, he digs down and buys another Thrift Stamp. But it would be impossible after our inspiring assemblies to lag in helping Uncle Sam win the war.

It is the wish of every Sophomore to be loyal to this country as he is to his school, and when the summer vacations come, to carry on with unabated zeal the patriotic work so well begun at Stivers High.

Helen Shetterly. Irene Kilbourne.

But lo, a change comes o'er the sea
The storm king's banner far is flung
The pilot starts, 'Ahoy'! cries he,
'Another victory won'.
Then every lad springs to his place,
The lasses chear them on,
And though great storms come on a pace,
They staunchly sing this song.

Each year the good ship touches port
And sets ashore an eager crew
Come battles now of every sort
To Stivers we'll be true.
Each eye is trained, trained is each hand
Life's lessons we'll learn well,
And in our hearts on sea or land
These words shall ever dwell.

Review of Football Season

HE opening of the football season in September found one of the most earnest and hard-working squads which Stivers ever had. Of the sixty-five candidates who responded to the coache's call, only four—Blair, Heathman, Davis and Bratten were back from last year's first team. After several weeks of hard practice, however, a well-balanced team was built around these men. The team went through the season without a single defeat and retained the city championship.

In the middle of the season the team was considerably handicapped, for Stevens, right tackle, broke his arm, and Blair and Bratten, veteran guards, left to enlist in the navy to guard the Democracy of the world. The tackle position was soon filled, but the guard positions caused much trouble, for it was difficult to find suitable guards. But even this great drawback did not hinder victory.

The victorious season was not the result of luck or fate, but was due to the true fighting spirit of the team, the leadership of Coach Marquardt and his assistant, Mr. Dreyer, and the faithful Stivers' rooters.

GEORGE HEATHMAN—CAPTAIN

George came out for football in his Junior year at Stivers. By practicing hard and studying the game in detail, he made pre-eminently good. Because of his ability, his knowledge of the game and his leadership, he was duly rewarded by being elected captain of the eleven. He proved himself a capable leader on the gridiron as well as in other phases of school activities.

CLARENCE WENTZEL-Left Half Back

His punting featured in many games this season. "Wentz" waited until his senior year to come out on the gridiron. He excelled in this sport as in all others. From the beginning he starred at left half back postion. We'll long for "Wentz" next year.

CHARLES KLEE—Quarter Back

Here is the old war horse. When "Chuck" started it took more than one man to stop him. His other nickname, "Dolls," was surely a misfit on the gridiron.

GEORGE DAVIS—Right Half Back

"Mickey" was always "scrappy" and full of "pep." How he'd plow through the opponent's line. "Mickey" will be missed next year—instead he has gone after the Kaiser.

ARTHUR ALTICK-Left Tackle

"Art" is a rare specimen; a wise scholar, a skillful artist, an all-around athlete, an enviable person! A youth modest and quiet, but right there at left tackle on the gridiron.

RUSSEL BOATMAN—Left End

After last year's training with the second team, "Rusty" developed into a fine left end. "Rusty" has one noticeable weakness—bashfulness—but it soon disappears when he is on the gridiron. Remember how he broke up Steele's plays on Thanksgiving Day?

JACOB GABLER-Right End

Although this was "Jake's" first year on the team, he played like a veteran. He filled the position of right end admirably. "Jake" will be back next year. Watch him!

"Bill" came to us from Fairview and brought with him plenty of grit and a desire to make good. He shared his position with another, but was right there when called upon.

It took nearly a whole team to stop him once he got started, even though he is just a Sophomore. We expect great things of "Weck" in the next two years.

"Ray" was a dependable guard. Although he shared his position with others he played the game hard whenever called upon. In spite of his lack of experience he played a good game.

Sam may have been at one time a fool in a pageant, but he was no "fooler" on the gridiron. Little but mighty was this chap. Whenever the opportunity came, Sam took it to struggle for Stivers.

LLOYD SHELLABARGER— Quarter Back (Sub)

"Shelley" started out to win his letter his Sophomore year, but did not make it. In his Junior year fate again decreed he should be a sub. This last fall, however, his perseverance won for him a place on the team. Many times "Shelley" helped bring victory to the Tigers.

CASTOR CHRISMAN—Tackle

It was just the spirit that he showed that made Stivers go through the season without a defeat. Although he did not play in a great number of games, "Cack" won a letter for his splendid and untiring aid at practice.

LINCOLN HERSHEY—Tackle

Every evening found "Link" at practice, encouraging and cheering the fellows. He often made the fellows forget that it was a long, long way to practice. Did you ever see "Link" out of humor?

WILLIAM HERMAN—Right Half Back

This man did wonders in athletics. When "Bill" hit the line he always got results, which pleased the Stivers' rooters. He fought hard for the Orange and Black, and in spite of his infancy in high school football, he displayed fine work at right half back.

ARTHUR LOGAN— Right Guard

He made his position a very hard one to penetrate. "Art" had the true Stivers' spirit when it came to football. He'd get right down and fight. Say, how he'd push 'em back and stack 'em up!

LAWRENCE LANDER—Right Tackle

My, how they'd stop when they hit him! At right tackle "Bud" was called a "tower of strength." He filled his position to the great satisfaction of all—except a few opponents whose misfortune it was to meet him.

WILLIAM RAPPSILBER— Left Guard

"Bill" had the pep and fighting spirit that insured him a place on the team at the end of the season. Although he did not play in many games he brought great credit to himself.

CLETUS SILLIN-Back Field Man

He never believes in giving up. "Clete" does not say much, but as a back field man he has the fighting spirit that wins in the face of any opposition. We'll back you next year, "Clete."

Athletics for Everybody

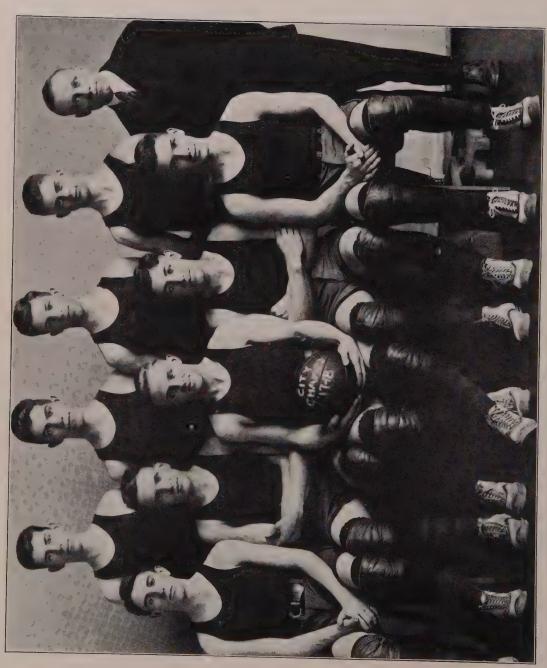

"How heavy he is!" "Wouldn't you like to see him play football now?" These are some of the exclamations one hears every time one of our boys, who is now in the fighting forces of the United States, returns to visit us.

What a change the soldier life makes in our boys! This all comes about mainly through the system of "athletics for every-body" which is conducted by the Recreational Division of the War Department and by the army workers of the Y. M. C. A. The committees and men in charge of this work do not pick out the star athlete and make perfect teams (machines), but on the other hand take everyone, good, medium or poor in athletic work and compel him to participate in physical activities two or three hours each day. To make this work interesting and seem as play, competition is held between individuals, companies and regiments. Army authorities know that activity causes growth and development, therefore the order of athletics daily for all.

After seeing the physical development of our own boys, and considering the millions and millions of dollars being spent by the government and such agencies as the Y. M. C. A. to promote athletic activities among our soldiers, no argument need be offered to prove that physical activities are a great factor in developing and keeping our great army in condition.

"Everybody in the game" is the slogan in the army, so it should be in high schools and all educational institutions. What physical activity does for our fighting forces, it will do for a student body. Why wait until one enlists or is drafted into the army to develop physically? How much better it would be for the nation and ourselves if a more intensive system of physical training were instituted in our high schools.

Let us at Stivers adopt and carry out the slogan of "every-body in the game," and thus prepare ourselves to meet any emergency which may come to us., W. M.

Review of Basketball Season

Another season has been added to Stivers' basketball history, one of which we may rightly be proud. Although several members of the first team were taken away from us by last year's class, their places were readily filled and splendid progress was made. At the beginning of the season the boys adopted as their motto "A Point a Minute," and with this to spur them on, they fought hard for the Orange and the Black.

After overcoming many hard teams from all over the state with only one defeat registered against them, the boys traveled to Delaware, where they entered the State Tournament. Here, after a hard fight, they lost to Piqua by one point. At Delaware, however, the team received much praise for their clean playing and splendid, sportsmanlike spirit. Three men, Heater, Altick and Mumma were chosen for the All-Southern teams. Heater gained also the position of center on the All-State team.

Every man gave the best that was in him, not for personal fame but for the glory of Stivers. The coach is to be complimented upon the quality of the team he produced. The second team also is to be praised for the part it played in making this season so successful.

CLARENCE MUMMA, Forward—Captain

It is hard to realize Captain "Bill" has played his last game for Stivers. He wasn't much for size, but he played a whirlwind game on the floor.

ARTHUR ALTICK-Guard

Can you find his equal? No! He could sketch you as you appear to others, or knit a square while you wait, but more than this he could always break up the success of the fast ball. Listen! He was chosen for the All-Southern team.

CLARENCE WENTZEL—Guard

"Wentz" was the man to watch the "other fellow." Whenever there was good pass work he was sure to be in the midst of it. Unfortunately he was kept out of active service the last few games because of an injury received in the Marietta game. To him we give the honors of the school.

VERS

HAROLD HEATER—Center

When it came to speed, "Speed" was right there. As center, he played a wonderful game for Stivers for two years. He made many long field goals, and never took long to locate the basket. "Speed" was chosen as center on the All-State. He will be missed next year.

This was "Schwaby's" first year of play on Stivers' first team, but he covered the floor like a veteran. He was always "everywhere" and in the right place at the critical moment. We expect great things of "Schwaby" next year.

LLOYD SHELLABARGER—Sub-Forward

"Shelley" was one who could help when help was needed. He was steady and persevering, and played a good game at forward. All we need is many more like him.

ELMER BRYAN-Sub-Guard

This was Bryan's first year of play, but whenever called upon he was right there. He will be back next year to show his "class" and to make the team go "over the top."

TIVERS

ERNEST ADELBERGER—Forward and Center

"Ernie" was a dependable sub. He showed a true fighting spirit toward the end of the season, especially when he played for several minutes at Delaware with a broken wrist. This was the kind of spirit that so many times led the team to victory.

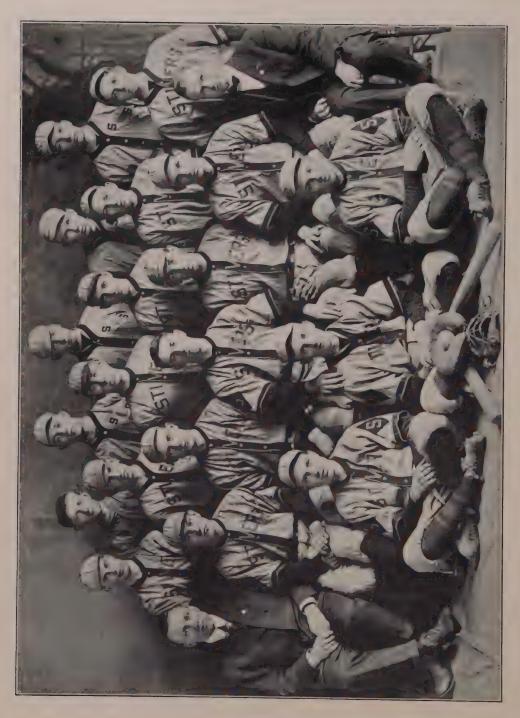

Bill was a steady, hard working guard who was always ready to do his "bit" and some extra. He is the fellow who will fight to the finish for Uncle Sam.

Girls' Basketball

Greater interest was shown in girls' basketball this year than ever before. In each study hall a team was organized and after school each fought its allotted opponent valiantly. At the close of a series of games, a winning team was chosen to represent each class. The three class teams then contested for honors. The wise Sophomore team won two of a series of three games, thereby gaining the title of champions.

Baseball

This season has proven especially interesting to baseball fans despite the fact that the weather has not always been favorable. Mr. Weimer, of the Co-operative Department, a man eminently fitted by experience for the position, was chosen coach.

If the weather proves favorable great things are to be expected for the remaining games. Baseball is quite practical this season, for while the boys are striving to become star pitchers, they are at the same time learning an art which may be of use to them in throwing hand grenades at the Huns some time in the near future.
